

Christopher Madden, BSc (Hons)
Regional Manager - Ireland

Chris Madden graduated from University of Ulster in 2002 where he gained a BSc (Hons) in Environmental Science with a Diploma in Industrial Studies.

During and following his degree Chris was employed by Northern Ireland Electricity as an Environmental Officer and Corporate Social Responsibility Coordinator specifically managing a certified environmental management system across all sites and operations. Chris was actively involved with the management of a number of major environmental incidents, redesigned the waste management system to identify waste revenue streams and increase the reuse and recycling of used materials and developed a Code of Practice in partnership with the Environment and Heritage Service for Working on Conservation Sites in NI. In addition Chris prepared a number of environmental performance reports for external reporting purposes.

In 2005 Chris joined OHES as a Senior Environmental Consultant and set up a regional division in Ireland managing environmental claims, developing remedial strategies, providing targeted training and developing a successful and profitable business unit. During his time with OHES Chris was involved with numerous incidents including a 900,000 litre fuel loss following a railway collision.

In 2009 Chris joined Ecologia as Regional Manager of Ecologia's new office in Ireland. Chris is responsible for the business development of our Irish Division and the daily management of the expanding office and operation.